PERSIANA COAT AND MUFF EN SUITE.

For fabrics have had quite an inning this season owing to their extreme beauty and strong likeness to the natural pelts. The little folks of the nursery have revelled in coats, bonnets, scarfs and muffs of cloths closely resembling ermine and moleskin, and the grownups have taken most kindly to the garments of persiana, a fur cloth miraculously like Persian lamb, and far less expensive than this costly pelt. The picture shows a three-quarter length coat of this fabric, hanging loose from the shoulders and fastening in double-breasted fashion with large loops and frogs of silk. The collar is a broad rolling affair, to be turned up in extreme weather, and the ample sleeve is of the regulation coat pattern. This coat is lined with a heavy dove gray satin, the flat pillow muf of persiana lined with the same.
